

Larry Graber holds a B.A. Degree from Willamette University. Prior to retirement, he was Manager of Family Based Services for the State of Oregon. Since that time, he and his wife Karen have volunteered in more than 30 overseas projects. Together with John Janzen he published this book telling of their Pax service, 1957-59.

“To learn to know something new is the heart of this extraordinary book describing the journeys of two young American men who went to the Congo for a two-year term of service and then spent three and a half months driving in their own car through East Africa, the Middle East and Europe before coming home to the United States.” Ardie Goering, Review, Mennonite World Review
